Diab labs. Hicham Elkhatir

7 hooks that stop the scroll

For coaches and consultants on short-form video

Swipe →

Diab labs. Hicham Elkhatir

01/09

Why the first 2 seconds matter

Most people decide to stay or scroll before you finish your first sentence.

The hook is not decoration. It's the whole game.

Swipe →

Diab labs. Hicham Elkhatir

02/09

1. Say the result first

"This one change doubled my watch time"
beats "So today I want to talk about..."

Short-form video for coaches and consultants

Swipe →

Diab labs. Hicham Elkhatir

2. Name who it’s for

"Coaches, this one's for you."

The right person stops. Everyone else scrolls, and that's fine.

Swipe →

Diab labs. Hicham Elkhatir

3. Open with a mistake

"You're losing clients in the first 3 seconds of your videos."

People can't resist checking if they're making it.

Diab labs. Hicham Elkhatir

05/09

4. Start mid-story

"The client sent me 40 minutes of footage. The best line was at minute 31."

No setup. Drop them in the middle.

Diab labs. Hicham Elkhatir

06/09

5. Say the unpopular thing

"You don't need to post every day."

A clear opinion makes people stop to agree or argue.

Diab labs. Hicham Elkhatir

07/09

6. Ask the question they ask themselves

"Why does my content get views but no clients?"

Use their words, not yours.

Diab labs. Hicham Elkhatir

7. Promise something small and specific

"One edit that keeps people watching past second 3."

Small and specific beats big and vague.

Diab labs. Hicham Elkhatir

09/09

Want this done for you?

I turn one 45-minute recording a week into short-form content that brings clients.

Follow for more, or send me a DM.

Short-form video for coaches and consultants

Send me a DM